CCAD (Chinese Modern Contemporary Art Document) is dedicated to the discovery, systematisation, and preservation of modern and contemporary Chinese art documentation. Through academic research, exhibitions, and publications, it facilitates public dissemination and education of art. Since its establishment, CCAD has undertaken numerous national and provincial-level key research projects. In collaboration with international scholars, museums, and art institutions, it has conducted extensive archival work on modern and contemporary art documentation. These efforts have evolved into serial research initiatives aimed at exploring, reconstructing, and interpreting the historical context of Chinese modern and contemporary art, while documenting and presenting its current developments and evolving trends.
