Singapore – the world's laboratory for a future society enthralls even the most seasoned of traveller with its diversity of cultures and cuisines. Here Chinese and Indians, Malays and delegates from all over the world live together in peace. The southeast Asian city-state is forever redefining itself, and only reveals its century-old secrets by degrees. Visitors marvel at its unique mixture of tradition and modernity. There are secrets and stories lurking under the shiny modern surface of the metropolis, just waiting to be discovered. This is the book that will lead you to these incredible places.

Dr Christoph Hein has lived in Singapore, where he works as a correspondent for a newspaper, for 20 years. He loves wandering through the city with his wife Sabine Hein-Seppeler. They love wandering through the city, deciphering its many secrets bit by bit. This is a laborious task - but one they are dedicated to, if they don't happen to be traveling the rest of Asia with their daughter or enjoying the cold rain of their native Germany.
