- This lavishly presented volume offers a glimpse into 35 of the most beautiful working spaces of contemporary architects from around the world, many of whom have designed their own studio
- With full-colour photographs, detailed plans and drawings, and incisive texts, each architect presents their design process and story behind their working studio
- The book is a lavish large-format hardcover, and includes more than 300 full-colour photographs

Contemporary architects design, develop, and create beautiful modern spaces, so it's no surprise that they too will need to work in an ideal creative working space that provides them with the perfect environment and essential conditions to help them draw inspiration and see their ideas evolve. Creating a studio for the architect requires that designers not only consider the essential form, function, and layout of the space, but also provide a relaxed working atmosphere, an especially valuable component of effective design team collaboration.

Beautifully illustrated throughout in rich full-colour, these pages provide an intimate and informative glimpse into 35 architects' studios from around the globe. Each project showcases the most current architectural design trends and the optimal layout form and function behind each stunning studio. Architects' Studios: Creative Working Spaces presents a stunning and unique collection of contemporary working environments, and provides indepth value and inspiration to architects, design practitioners, and other creatives who are preparing to design, create, or renovate their own working studio.
