- Street artist Bué's work can be seen in Europe, Mexico, USA, Brazil and Vietnam; this is the first book to be published on the artist
- Preface by Tristan Manco, specialist in Street Art

"Bué has been drawing forever. He finds his satisfaction from putting smiles on people's faces, or giving them a heart-warming feeling." Tristan Manco Clearly influenced by comics and cartoons, Bué has created a specific idiom that he translates to the street. His colourful characters brighten streets around the world. Bué is internationally acclaimed as one of Belgium's pioneers of Street Art. These days, Street Art is recognised by a broad audience and Bué's style and techniques are remarkable and distinctive. His characters interact with the local public as he travels around the world. This book presents a selection of the best works, murals and other creations. Text in English and Spanish.

Bue the Warrior (Dave De Rop) grew up in a family of cartoonists. He continued the family tradition but uses the streets as his canvas. For years he's been doing what he loves most - bringing colour and positive energy to the places that need it most.
