

Christian Jankowski

Sender and Receiver

Edited by Markus Hannebauer

Text by Robert Eikmeyer

Text by Wenjie Sun

Text by Junia Thiede

Text by Annette Tietenberg

ISBN	9783735607560
Publisher	Kerber
Binding	Hardback
Territory	World excluding Germany, Austria, Switzerland, the US & Canada
Size	250 mm x 200 mm
Pages	184 Pages
Illustrations	140 color
Price	£39.90

- An important publication from one of the most important German conceptual and media artists, Christian Jankowski
- Jankowski's art from the past two decades has been documented in extensive photo series and is accompanied by a variety of texts that examine the content in depth

A key element in Christian Jankowski's (*1968) practice of art involves feeding interventions peppered with humour into media contexts and closed systems. The paths of transmission and moments of disruption materialised in the exhibition Sender and Receiver at Fluentum, which featured a selection of new and previously rarely seen works. The show has been conceptually extended via the eponymous catalogue: Jankowski's art from the past two decades has been documented in extensive photo series and is accompanied by a variety of texts that examine the content in depth.

Of particular interest: a piece on the current coronavirus pandemic. In it, the artist gives so-called essential workers a temporary platform on select television formats in order to publicly share their personal experiences and impressions in a time when living conditions have been altered by the pandemic. The result is a complex stratum of unconventional narratives layered on top of television's usual working order.

Text in English and German.

