“Cologne is a feeling”, say the locals, and it is also a magnet for tourists. Some five million people visit this cathedral city every year. Cologne is not a polished and shiny place, but has its rough edges. It is scarcely possible to explain the city in abstract terms. You have to see and feel it, and this is exactly the starting point for this new guide to Cologne.

Frank Geile, born in 1964, studied history and geography, specialising in the Rhineland. For more than 20 years he has managed an event agency and regularly organises city walks and tourist programmes on both sides of the river Rhine. In recent years he has written many books about the Rhineland and has a profound knowledge of the region.
