- A visual journey through striking concrete interiors
- Each project is briefly introduced, but the true essence of these spaces is captured through Peulen's striking photography
- Features projects from various locations across Europe including Belgium and Switzerland

Concrete Homes is a stunning collection of inspiring brutalist interiors, carefully selected and photographed by visual creative Pieter Peulen. This book showcases remarkable homes that embrace the raw beauty of brutalist architecture, where concrete is softened by the warmth of wood and thoughtfully curated design objects. Each project is briefly introduced, but the true essence of these spaces is captured through Peulen's striking photography. Concrete Homes is a visual journey into the refined side of brutalism, offering inspiration for design enthusiasts and architecture lovers alike.

Pieter Peulen is a Belgian visual creative specialising in photography, interior, and furniture design. He crafts compelling content for fashion, design, and beauty brands, both online and offline. After studying interior and furniture design, Peulen expanded his expertise to include photography and social media. He gained significant attention by sharing images of his minimalist, brutalist-style home in Zonhoven, Belgium, on Instagram. These posts resonated with a large audience, leading to a substantial following (365K followers).
