- Architects Yves Dreier and Eik Frenzel have for years been expanding their architectural profession with the two related tasks of architectural criticism and architectural photography

The young Lausanne architects Yves Dreier and Eik Frenzel have for years been expanding their architectural profession with the two related tasks of architectural criticism and architectural photography. From these fields, they gain insight for their own designs. In recent years, they have thereby developed well-conceived buildings, both large and small. Text in German with English translation sheet.
