- A dialogue between the different ways of approaching the exercise of self-portrait, through the works of different French painters from the 19th and 20th centuries
- Text in English and French

Through some 50 works, this book seeks to establish a dialogue between the different ways of approaching the exercise of self-portrait: firstly between artists, but also between the works of the same painter, like Bonnard, whose dark and sometimes disturbing side of his self-portraits takes the opposite view from the usually peaceful and serene oeuvre of the French master.

Text in English and French.
