A new, thoroughly revised and expanded edition of the beloved Scotland guide by local Lauren MacCallum. Because she is so passionate about exploring new places, Lauren always has a list of new secrets ready to share. The new entries in this book include her favourite and recently discovered spots in Orkney Islands and the far north of the Highlands, like the coolest places along the North Coast 500. She also added, for example, the best activities in every season in her home area of Cairngorms.

This book isn't your typical Scottish travel guide; instead, it aims to encourage you to define your own sense of adventure, to explore beyond the usual hot spots and get to know the real Scotland. It will help you to see beyond the tartan trinkets, Irn-Bru and haggis, and to experience the authentic life in Scotland, so you'll understand what's so unique about this small stretch of land and its inhabitants. The book covers an eclectic range of over 60 themes such as: unusual art spaces; gin and whisky distilleries worth a visit; amazing coastal walks; dramatic lochs and bookshops with character.

Lauren MacCallum is an outdoor lover, has worked in winter sports and cycling industry, and is a public speaker and TV presenter. Combined those take her to some of the best corners of the great wee country that is Scotland.

Dundee institution Clark's Bakery is now in its third generation. Starting in 1950 this bakery has been a haven for clubbers, commuters, students and everyone in between. Their mouth-watering pies have to be sampled if you are in Dundee, especially after the pubs close. You can choose from traditional fillings such as macaroni, steak, and tattie bean. Or more adventurous ones like chicken tikka, bolognaise or sweet rhubarb pie. But whatever choice you go for, order "Twa hoat pehs an an ingin ane ana". That means: "Two hot pies and a onion one as well" for those who don't know.

Right, you've probably seen these epic 'big hot sandwiches' on socials, and for good reason: they're delicious. The Leith shop is open until 9 pm and you can even reserve a table if you want to linger. There's another spot on the south side too, but that one shuts at 4 pm. Big flavours, big personality, not to be missed.
