- A monograph on a pair of Bern-based architects, featuring some of their projects for communal areas, such as nurseries, residences, and schools
 - Of interest to any aspiring or practising architect looking for examples of buildings constructed with community in mind
- The two Bern-based architects Adrian Kast and Thomas Kaeppli founded their firm in 2008, including a branch in Basel. In terms of their floor plan, section and construction, their buildings are well-considered, precise structures that have been developed in a sophisticated way: for instance, various residential buildings, three kindergartens and several school buildings. Text in English and German.
