"A love letter to Italy expressed through fashion, craft, tradition, festivities, camaraderie, and sense of la dolce vita." — Forbes

"Dolce&Gabbana's Alta Moda shows are the epicentre of Italian fashion. The luxury lifestyle brand began its annual grand flourishes in 2012 and has since made a custom of staging the last word in Italian elegance with shows unlike any other, each lasting an entire weekend at an exclusive, invitation-only location.

Behind the scenes of these unique events, the preparations are meticulous, with designers, models, crew members, directors and makeup artists, all adding their finishing touches before the first silhouette is cast out on the runway. Matt Lever is one of only a handful of photographers ever invited to the shows. Covering almost every show since their inception, his images of the backstage commotion take us on a visual journey through Dolce&Gabbana's intimate inner workings.

Lavishly illustrated, La Dolce Vita is a sublime coffee-table volume, perfect for fans and followers of high fashion and a compelling work of art for anyone with an interest in the sculpting of the most lauded pageants in the fashion calendar.

Matt Lever was born and raised in England. He attended the Bournemouth & Poole College of Art & Design before leaving England for California where he is based today. Matt has shot backstage at fashion shows since 1999, representing British Elle for the majority of this time. He shoots backstage exclusively for Dolce&Gabbana at their Alta Moda fashion shows and has also been sponsored by photographic luggage company Lowepro to represent them in the field of fashion photography. Matt's first book, Behind the Runway: Backstage Access to Fashion's Biggest Shows, was released in 2016. Matt also works in advertising and editorial photography and has a client list that includes Harper's Bazaar, Elle, Gap, Banana Republic, Dolce&Gabbana, Akris and Oracle to name a few.
