- Original multisensory concept with felt inserts inside die-cut board pages
- Encourages tactile, motor, and cognitive development
- Exclusive illustrations by Agnese Baruzzi
- Two essential early-learning themes
- Strong international appeal within the novelty board book market

A new series of interactive board books that transforms early learning into a truly multisensory experience. Colourful felt inserts are hidden between the sturdy board pages and revealed through die-cut pathways and shaped openings, inviting little hands to trace soft tactile trails and explore key elements of each illustration. This unique feature supports hand-eye coordination, tactile awareness, fine motor skills, and early cognitive development while turning every page into an engaging discovery. Agnese Baruzzi's vibrant, instantly recognisable illustrations make learning fun and intuitive.

Learning Colors introduces young children to the main colours through familiar objects. Each felt pathway matches the colour of the illustrated elements, creating an immediate visual and tactile association that helps children recognise, name, and remember colours while enjoying an interactive reading experience.

Ages 0-3 years.
