- A beautifully curated journey to Mallorca's most exceptional holiday homes — from restored fincas and historic stone houses to contemporary retreats by the sea
- Combines inspiring house portraits with architecture, interiors, landscape, and personal stories that capture the island beyond the usual clichés
- Includes exclusive insider tips from the hosts: hidden coves, village restaurants, wineries, pottery workshops, and special places off the beaten track

Welcome to Mallorca — the island of stone houses, olive terraces, and dreamlike coves. After exploring the Mediterranean region and the Alps, this book now takes its readers to the beloved island and looks more closely: to the Serra de Tramuntana, where fincas nestle into steep hillsides and the scent of wild rosemary drifts across olive terraces; to the quiet interior, between almond blossom and vineyards; and to the calas of the east, where warm Marès stone meets turquoise water.

This book brings together a curated selection of exceptional holiday homes that rank among the island's most beautiful retreats — from restored country estates with centuries-old masonry to pared-back architectural houses overlooking the sea. Each home embodies its own interpretation of Mallorcan hospitality. And beyond the house portraits, the hosts also share their personal tips for the surrounding area: small village taverns, hidden bathing coves, pottery workshops, and wineries one might otherwise never have discovered.

Elena Berchermeier is a freelance journalist, copywriter, and consultant with a background in fashion journalism, media communications, and cultural journalism. She writes for publications such as VOGUE, GLAMOUR, falstaff, GQ Germany, and Business Punk, bringing together a refined aesthetic sensibility with the ability to capture places, people, and the stories behind them. Having lived in Berlin and Munich before moving to the Bavarian countryside, she knows first-hand what it means to exchange the pace of the city for a more considered way of life. This perspective makes her an ideal voice for a book about Mallorca's most beautiful holiday homes: places of retreat, character, and atmosphere, where architecture, landscape, and personal stories come together.
