- A monograph on the work of eclectic designer, architecture and artist, Lionel Jadot

“Travelling the globe to work on various projects, from large European businesses to European royalty, Jadot brings a custom approach to each project, oftentimes designing the furniture that’s for each one.” – www.design-milk.com “My job is very varied and I like creating a new universe each day. My style is not defined and it is the diversity of my work that attracts people. Dreamers are my best audience.” – Lionel Jadot “I never make a decor that is fashionable but I always try to find out what is hidden behind the walls of a house and I try to create something authentic, where all elements come together and the end result is correct and honest.” – Lionel Jadot

Lionel Jadot is the archetype of an eclectic person. Born from a family of furniture makers, the workshop was his playground and at a very young age he became interested in the art of making furniture. He expanded his focus later on and can now call himself an architect, interior designer, designer, artist and movie director. In his view working equals playing, recycling, assembling, always with a nod towards other cultures, the past, and local context. Text in English and Dutch.

Thijs Demeulemeester is a Belgian lifestyle journalist, specialising in interiors, contemporary art and architecture.
