- Lionel Morrison is a renowned modernist architect. The fourteen homes, arranged in chronological order and covering four decades, showcase Morrison's steadfast commitment to modernism throughout the course of his career
- The residences share similar or even identical building programs, yet each exhibits a strikingly unique appearance, being specifically designed for the surrounding environment and according to the client's needs
- Morrison details his approach to each project and its context, providing valuable personal insight into his design process
- Two respected figures in their architectural fields demonstrate the importance of Morrison's work: Lucilo Peña introduces the book, and Nate Eudaly provides the Foreword
- Beautifully presented with a matte-laminated cover embellished with a spot gloss varnish, the clean and spacious book design reflects Morrison's commitment to contemporary modernism

As a committed modernist, Lionel Morrison's approach to architecture and design has been consistent and steadfast from his first project to the present. He adheres to the core principles of modernism while thoughtfully addressing the context and brief for each project.

Arranged in chronological order, the fourteen residences presented in this collection illustrate how Morrison's architectural point of view, formed early in his career, has led to a consistent and distinguished body of work. Illustrated with stunning colour photography and detailed floor plans, the selected homes trace Morrison's career from Texas to California to New Mexico.

Modernism in Context: Homes by Lionel Morrison is essential inspiration for those interested in architecture, modernism, and residential design. It is also an invaluable resource for architectural students and academics, offering insights into the design process from a contemporary modernist architect who has a distinctive style all his own.

Lionel Morrison gained a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Texas at Austin and a Master of Architecture from the University of Texas at Arlington. He started his firm in 1982 and has produced exceptional work in Texas, New Mexico, Georgia, Florida, and California. In 1992, his first year of eligibility, Morrison was elevated to the College of Fellows in Design. Four years later he was named the Distinguished Alumnus by the School of Architecture at the University of Texas at Arlington. The following year he was named the Outstanding Architect by the American Institute of Interior Designers. Lionel Morrison's residential and commercial work has been consistently recognised by his peers, with over 30 design awards. He has served on design juries throughout the Southwest and lectured at various universities and associations. He holds a Design Fellowship in the American Institute of Architects.
