Fifty-six buildings, realised in South Tyrol in 2018 –24, were selected by an international jury to tell the region's most recent architectural history. This book features them in groups and lavishly illustrated with photographs, plans, and drawings, many of which have never been published before. Essays and critical observations supplement the images and open up a dialogue, reveals hidden connections, and inspire new reflections. Texts and images invite readers to discover and understand architecture and its motivations.

New Architecture in South Tyrol 2018-2024 continues the series of books that has comprehensively documented architectural developments and the rich building culture in South Tyrol since 2000. It is the unique building culture of a region that is characterised by an open, forward-looking view of traditional approaches in architecture.

Text in English, German and Italian.
