Those who travel today want to know more than technical information, tourist sites and their addresses: they want to know the culture of a place and the mythical stories that made it a place to worship. This is the ideal book for anyone about to start their travels, who want to bring back its culture in their bag, or get to experience it from afar.

William Dello Russo holds a degree in the Conservation of Cultural Heritage, specialising in Medieval Art History. With that, he has vast experience in tourism and art as an author, editor, and iconographic researcher for well-known publishing houses including Mondadori, Rizzoli, Electa, Lonely Planet, Touring Editore, Editions Jonglez, Gallimard, Sime Books and several magazines.
