- The story of Ferdinand Piëch, grandson of Ferdinand Porsche, who worked at Porsche between 1963 and 1972
- Detailing how his technological vision lifted the company to a new level of achievement

Ferdinand Piëch, grandson of Ferdinand Porsche, was one of the most powerful men in the automobile industry. He is regarded as a brilliant designer and a technological visionary. Piëch worked at Porsche from 1963 to 1972: this book tells us the story. In addition to being head of technology during this period, he was also in charge of motor racing. The Carrera 6 was the first creation of the then 29-year-old engineer. Legendary sports cars followed: 910, 907, 909, 908, and the most thrilling racing car worldwide: the twelve-cylinder Porsche 917. During his time there, the small Swabian company made its way to the top of motorsports, while before the Piëch era it was just class wins and respectable positions. Text in German.

The author, journalist Eckhard Schimpf, has followed the career of Ferdinand Piëch for many years and has based this book on numerous conversations they had.
