TITLE INFORMATION
Tel: +44 (0) 1394 389950
Email: uksales@accartbooks.com
Web: https://www.accartbooks.com/uk

Taking Apart

An Incomplete Catalog of AW–ARCH

Alex Anmahian

Nick Winton

Edited by Chris Grimley

Edited by Alan Rapp

ISBN	9783038604860
Publisher	Park Books
Binding	Hardback
Territory	World excluding Austria, France, Germany, Switzerland, Puerto Rico, United States, Canada, and Japan
Size	230 mm x 180 mm
Pages	304 Pages
Illustrations	250 color, 50 b&w
Price	£45.00

- First full monograph on the work of design firm AW-ARCH based in Cambridge, MA
- Richly illustrated with photographs, plans, and drawings from AW-ARCH's archive
- Highlights how AW-ARCH's work emerges from an exacting engagement with site, program, and construction
- AW-ARCH is widely recognised for its precise detailing, material intelligence, and conceptual clarity

Taking Apart: An Incomplete Catalog of AW–ARCH presents the first comprehensive monograph on the work of Cambridge-based architects Alex Anmahian and Nick Winton. Structured as a taxonomic exploration, the book arranges more than three decades of projects into thematic chapters—Figure/Object, Light/Shadow, Material/Assembly, and Shell/Liner—revealing the conceptual threads that run through the firm's houses, observatories, boathouses, cultural spaces, and urban interventions.

Drawn from the studio's extensive archive, the book features around 300 photographs, plans, and drawings and includes new reflections on process, materiality, and the sensory and spatial ambitions of the practice. Essays and project texts describe how AW–ARCH's work emerges from an exacting engagement with site, program, and construction, resulting in architecture that is simultaneously rigorous, inventive, and deeply attuned to experience.

Alex Anmahian and Nick Winton are the principals of the design firm AW–ARCH based in Cambridge, MA. They both also teach, lectures, and serve as a visiting critics at leading design schools. Chris Grimley is the founder and creative director of Boston-based design and communications studio SIGNALS. Alan Rapp is an editor and publishing consultant with deep expertise in architecture, design, and visual culture. He serves as Editorial Director with The Monacelli Press.

Publish date 13th Sep 2027