- The Haukohl Family stands in the wake of a lasting tradition of European and American collecting practices for the benefit of future generations
- Published to accompany an exhibition at the Luxembourg National Museum of Art, October 2018 to February 2019

For six generations the Haukohls have collected art, rare books, drawings, sculpture and textiles. It has been the fulfilling result of a Milwaukee-based American Midwestern family who has had equal determination and always with an eye towards acquiring fine art for the benefit of the future generations. This book presents masterworks of Italian painting and sculpture from the 16th through 18th centuries drawn from the largest private American collection of Florentine Baroque painting, featuring works by key artists such as Cesare Dandini, Jacopo da Empoli, and Francesco Furini.
