- Compelling cyber thriller featuring a catastrophic computer virus
- An exciting, international thriller
- Exploring the global dangers of internet security
- Written by a top cyber security expert

Utrecht, The Netherlands. 13 February 2034. A self-driving car is hacked and its safety features deactivated, causing a deadly accident. NATO, supervising global internet security, realises the whole world is in danger when soon afterwards two more attacks occur. Europol inspector Lara Hartman and communications specialist Frank Willems are at the forefront of a desperate manhunt for the criminals behind these acts of cyber terrorism. Everything seems to be pointing to a dangerous computer virus. But time is running out, and they must find an antivirus that can prevent evil from striking again…

Eddy Willems is a globally recognised cyber security evangelist. In 2013, he released his first book Cyberdanger, available in Dutch, English and German. Alain Dierckx provides management and consultancy on communication for digitisation projects. As a copywriter, he assists start-ups with their public relations and messaging.
