The World of Birds is a beautifully illustrated introduction to the incredible world of birds for curious readers ages 8 plus. From familiar garden birds like robins to majestic birds of prey, this engaging guide explores how birds evolved, communicate, migrate, build nests, and interact with nature and people. Clear, accessible text and vibrant illustrations make complex scientific topics easy to understand while encouraging children to observe the birds around them. Featuring species from backyards to distant continents, the book inspires young naturalists to discover the diversity of birdlife across the globe. Written by naturalist and birdwatcher Aldo Bafico, it combines accurate scientific information with a sense of wonder, making it an ideal resource for both learning and outdoor exploration. Perfect for children who love animals, nature, and wildlife, The World of Birds invites readers to look up, explore, and uncover the fascinating secrets hidden in the skies above them.

Sara Lastella is a biologist, she works in children's publishing with the goal of introducing young people to science through clear and engaging content.
