- William Blake's wood engravings, published in a stand-alone book for the first time, with the original text of Ambrose Philips' version of the first Eclogue of Virgil

Blake’s only wood engravings, made near the end of his life for a school edition of Virgil, are among his most lyrical and enduringly influential creations. This is their first publication as a stand-alone book, with the original text of Ambrose Philips’ version of the first Eclogue of Virgil.
