- An architect's lifework, explained in his own words
- Patrick Ahearn takes us on a journey through the award-winning private residences and public environments he has created over his 45-year career
- Pays attention to Ahearn's uniquely urbanistic perspective, as well as how he works with clients to develop timeless dream-houses

Sensitively balancing historic preservation with contemporary innovation, Ahearn’s timeless houses feel deeply connected to the stylistic character of their locales, even as their programs and plans celebrate how we live now. In these pages, Ahearn takes us on a journey through the award-winning private residences and public environments that he has created over his 45-year career. He entertainingly explains how his uniquely urbanistic point of view and novel, narrative-driven process help clients live out their dreams, in homes that recall the past, engage with the present, and look to the future.

Celebrated as one of America's top classical architects, Patrick Ahearn, a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects, began his career with ambitious adaptive-reuse public projects. For the past 25 years he has focused primarily on historically motivated, site-sensitive private residences in New England. Raised in Levittown, New York, and based in Boston for the past four decades, he received degrees in architecture and urban design from Syracuse University. Today, he oversees a firm of 12 designers, working in studios in Boston's Back Bay and in Edgartown, on Martha's Vineyard.
