- The most in-depth analysis of the development of Vietnam from Bronze Age, through the Nguy□n dynasties (erecting many of the temples modern day visitors would visit in Hue), through French colonialists to the modern day
- French colonial historians preserved and researched state annals in old demotic script and created the three world-class museums we have today in Hanoi, DaNang and Ho Chi Minh

Unfurling Dragon – The Multicultural Art of Vietnam is a companion volume to From the Red River to the Mekong Delta ISBN 9786164510722. A collection of over 20 essays from the world's leading authorities on the art, history or archaeology of Vietnam. From the Bronze Age lowlanders who settled the Red River Valley, the technologically advanced people in the 10th century who stopped a Chinese fleet and declared sovereignty, a Buddhist state that would continue to expand southwards to dominate the long established and artistically advanced Hindu, Buddhist then Islamic culture of multiple ethnic Cam coastal settlements. Finally, in the 18th century the Nguy□n – Dynasty and absorbed the Khmer-Camic culture of the Mekong River Delta.

Peter D. Sharrock is a senior teaching fellow in the history of art and archaeology at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London and module co-convenor of the SOAS-Alphawood Postgraduate Diploma in Asian Art. He is a former journalist who covered the Vietnamese-American War.
