- Each photograph in Winterland conveys the touching stillness and meditative calm of winter landscapes, inviting the viewer to pause for a moment and savour the moment
- Christophe Jacrot's photographs reveal the ephemeral splendour of snow, which is both sublime and fleeting, a natural phenomenon that comes and goes and reminds us of life's precious moments
- This work evokes nostalgic memories of unspoiled winter landscapes and the joy of snow-covered adventures, creating a deep emotional connection between the viewer and the wintry scenery

This book by photographer Christophe Jacrot comprises a fascinating collection of winter and snow images. Jacrot, known for his unique ability to transform weather phenomena into poetic and atmospheric works of art, captures the quiet beauty of snowy landscapes and the melancholy of winter scenes.

The book is a journey through various wintry settings, from urban snowstorms to lonely, snow-covered landscapes. Jacrot's focus on light and shadow, combined with his subtle colour palette, highlights the ephemeral magic of winter. Each photograph tells a story of stillness, cold and the unspoiled purity of nature.

The book not only celebrates the aesthetic beauty of winter, but also captures the different facets of the season, from isolation to contemplation.

This project aims to transport viewers into a dreamy winter world that reflects both the delicacy and harshness of nature. It is a visual masterpiece that brings together the fascination for winter landscapes and the artistic brilliance of Christophe Jacrot.

Christophe Jacrot is a French director and photographer known for his poetic depictions of rain, snow and winter landscapes. After a successful career in film, he turned to photography and created impressive series such as Paris sous la pluie and Snjór, which show urban and natural scenes in weather extremes. Jacrot's work, which is often compared to American street photographers and Japanese artists, has been exhibited and celebrated worldwide. He regularly collaborates with the Galerie de l'Europe in Paris.
