- A powerful homage by Ai Weiwei to his father
- Ai Weiwei pays tribute to two poets who shaped a remarkable cultural bridge: his father, the Chinese poet Ai Qing, and the Belgian poet Emile Verhaeren
- A moving history that connects poetry, memory, and artistic heritage across cultures
- Published to accompany the exhibition at the Emile Verhaeren Museum in Puurs-Sint-Amands from September 20 onwards
- At the same time, a parallel exhibition featuring works by Ai Weiwei will be presented at Galerie Patrick Derom in Brussels, Belgium

In this unique project, Ai Weiwei pays tribute to two poets who shaped a remarkable cultural bridge: his father, the Chinese poet Ai Qing, and the Belgian poet Émile Verhaeren. Ai Qing was the first to translate Verhaeren's poetry into Chinese, introducing the Belgian writer to readers in China. Out of deep admiration for his father's legacy Ai Weiwei accepted the invitation to create an exhibition and catalogue exploring the bond between these two literary figures. This book is a moving homage that connects poetry, memory, and artistic heritage across cultures.
