Breathtakingly beautiful and staggeringly historic, it's easy to do Oxford wrong – but there's more here than Harry Potter tourists and hordes of undergrads. This student city is surprisingly youthful, with a bustling food, theater and arts scene that belies its size. Whether you're here for the centuries-old libraries and colleges, magnificent museums, indie shops, culinary diversity of Cowley Road, Jericho café culture or plethora of storied pubs, there is plenty to explore beyond the tourist trail. This is your boldly opinionated guide to the best of it.

Hester Underhill is a journalist and editor. Specializing in culture and design, she has written for publications including The New York Times, Financial Times and The Guardian, and co-produced several BBC podcasts. She grew up in Oxford but is now based in Athens.
