This comprehensive monograph celebrates the work of Dominique Perrault, an architect and urban planner who has worked on iconic projects all over the world. He's left his mark on world architecture with major projects such as the Olympic velodrome in Berlin, the Ewha Women's University in Seoul and more recently the Olympic Village in Paris.

The foreword discusses a thought process and an architecture that makes no secret of its attraction to contemporary art. A glossary, along with a small catalogue raisonné, concludes the monograph.
