Born in Spain to Lebanese parents, photographer Fadia Ahmad has spent more than 20 years building a body of work between Beirut, Spain, France and other places encountered through her travels. Her images explore the city, its architecture, its landscapes and the traces left by Lebanon's recent history, in particular after the 2020 explosion at the port of Beirut.

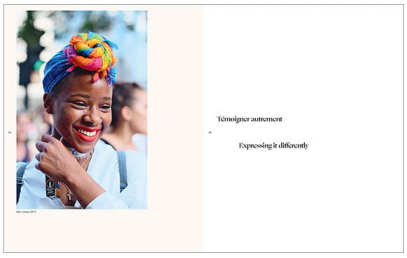

Moving between urban scenes, fragments of everyday life and more abstract investigations of color and light, Echoes brings together a selection of her major series in a richly illustrated art book of around 150 images.

The photographs are accompanied by a text by art critic and curator Pascale Le Thorel.

Text in French and English.
