- An essential guide to the last twenty-five years of Scottish art

In the last twenty-five years contemporary art in Scotland has grown from a tiny and tightly knit community to a globally recognized center of artistic innovation and experiment. This book provides the first comprehensive and fully illustrated guide to the art of the period. Featuring the work of more than eighty contemporary artists who first made their careers in Scotland including Turner Prize winners Douglas Gordon, Simon Starling and Martin Boyce. An accessible introduction for new audiences and a handy reference guide to the art of this period.

Moira Jeffrey is an art critic based in Glasgow. The leading commentator on Scotland's contemporary art scene she is Chief Art Critic at The Scotsman newspaper and a regular broadcaster on cultural matters.
