Based in Bern and Zurich, the practice GWJ Architektur consists of 50 people from ten different countries. It aims to create sustainably attractive locations for individuals and society as a whole, constructing socially, economically and climate-compatible projects throughout Switzerland. For instance, the administration buildings in Ittigen are a modern reinterpretation of the renewable building material of wood. The Huebergass housing estate was commended by the UIA in the category “Sustainable Future”.

Text in English and German.
