Photographer Jérôme Schlomoff (b. 1961) has been capturing the souls of artists and numerous creative figures through his lens since 1984. He presents his portraits against a white background, tightly framed, with no props, showcasing a magnificent interplay of light and shadow. Look at Me is a raw, face-to-face exchange – an inviting gaze.

This new book brings together his hundred most iconic photographs, including portraits of Georg Baselitz, Jean-Michel Basquiat, Gilbert & Georges, Keith Haring, Panamarenko, Bill Viola, John Cale, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Juliette Gréco, Michael Stipe, and Peter Greenaway. Each portrait is accompanied by a poetic narrative by Didier Arnaudet, in an intuitive layout.

Jérôme Schlomoff (1961) studied photography at the Audiovisual Institute in Paris. Since 1984, Schlomoff has worked mainly as a photographer. He is known for his portrait series of contemporary artists. In 1996, his interest in architecture led him to create the series Sténopés d'Architecture (Architectural Pinhole). In 2000, he built his own 35mm pinhole camera. Schlomoff lives and works in Amsterdam.
