- Not only represents a systematic summary of Shanghai's historical building preservation efforts, but also stands as a significant achievement in integrating culture heritage with technological innovation within the development of "Smart Digital City"
- Through reviewing historical archives, thoroughly explores the cultural significance of buildings along the Hunagpu River
- Provides a vivid example for organic urban regeneration

This book guides you along the Huangpu River's living corridor, uncovering Shanghai's urban memories through a richly detailed bilingual map that pins historic buildings and threads together sweeping historical narratives and cultural legacies. Known as Shanghai's mother river, the Huangpu has nurtured Jiangnan civilization and served as the birthplace of China's national industry and early modernization; the transformations along its banks hold deep collective memories and shape the city's identity, embodying the spirit of Shanghai and the harmony between urban life and waterways. A walk along both banks reveals an extraordinary concentration of distinctive historic architecture—landmarks of modern Chinese history in diverse styles—and this volume systematically catalogs outstanding heritage buildings within the Huangpu River planning area, pairing selected entries with archival materials and curated narratives to create an indispensable guide for historians, architects, urban explorers, and visitors seeking Shanghai's past vividly retold.

Text in English and Mandarin.

The Shanghai Municipal Commission of Housing, Urban-Rural Development and Management was established in 2015 as a constituent body of the Shanghai Municipal People's Government, responsible for overseeing housing and urban-rural development management across the city. The Shanghai Society for Urban Studies is an academic organization voluntarily formed by universities, research institutes, government departments, relevant enterprises and institutions, and urban science and technology professionals. It is an independent legal entity registered with the national civil affairs department and serves as an organizational member of the Shanghai Association for Science and Technology.
