Meyer Davis: The Language of Home offers an intimate glimpse into the creative partnership of Will Meyer and Gray Davis, co-founders of the globally recognized architecture and design firm known for shaping award-winning hospitality and residential spaces. This publication presents a curated selection of Meyer Davis's residential projects—spanning city penthouses, lakeside retreats, coastal sanctuaries, a Mexican villa, and a luxury yacht—each reflecting intimacy, elegance, and individuality. Framed as a dialogue between Will and Gray, interwoven with anecdotes from their lives and collaborators, the narrative reveals the art of design, the joy of collaboration, and how personal context shapes their vision. Will's bold, instinctive approach balanced with Gray's thoughtful, detail-oriented perspective creates a conversational rhythm that mirrors their architecture: layered, collaborative, and alive.

Richly illustrated with photography, sketches, and material boards, this book is both a showcase of design excellence and a personal journey into the minds of two of today's most influential voices in contemporary architecture.
