TITLE INFORMATION
Tel: +1 212 645 1111
Email: ussales@accartbooks.com
Web: https://www.accartbooks.com/us

Nightingales

Sitting for Lucian Freud and Other Stories

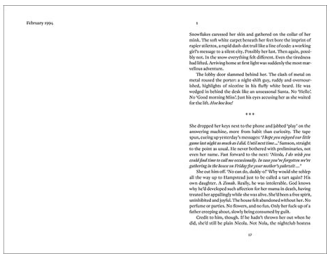

Dominic Jay

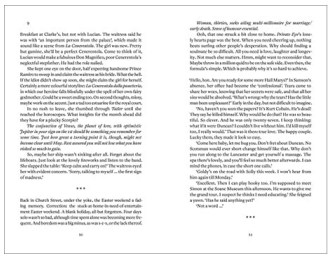

ISBN	9781911422440
Publisher	Circa Press
Binding	Hardback
Territory	USA & Canada
Size	5.31 in x 8.46 in
Pages	216 Pages
Illustrations	20 color
Name of series	Stories & Scenes
Price	$29.95

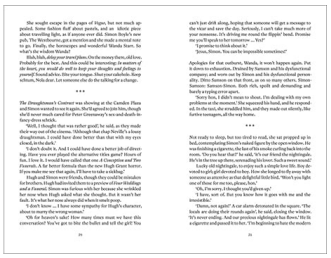

- Second novel by former arts journalist Dominic Jay
- A gripping roman-à-clef, set in 1994, in London and South Africa
- Authentic insights into the 1990s alternative club scene
- Combines art photography and storytelling in a new hybrid form

It is 1994, the year of the OJ Simpson saga, Tony Blair's rise to the leadership of the Labour Party, and South Africa's first fully multi-racial elections. Nola Marks is a London nightclub hostess with an art history degree and itchy feet. Suddenly her world changes. She begins a new career with a fledgling publishing company, meets Lucian Freud, and finds herself adopted as his latest muse. Over the course of the following seven months, her professional and emotional worlds are turned upside down, as external forces impact in unexpected ways. Set ten years on from Tableaux, the author's debut novel, the narrative cuts between divergent national cultures and different social tribes. With photographs by Jamie Noise, Nightingales combines art and storytelling in a compelling hybrid form.

Jamie Noise is an artist, photographer, and filmmaker whose distinctive style blends vintage aesthetics with vibrant contemporary glamour. Driven by a love of storytelling, his photographs weave intriguing narratives around a cast of strikingly beautiful but mysterious characters. Dominic Jay is a former arts journalist. His professional life gave him privileged access to people and places that are usually off limits. The material for this, his second novel, was collected over many years. Many of the scenes and characters are drawn from life. As he says, 'all writers are voyeurs'.

Publish date 25th May 2027