- Students and alumni of the Department of Gemstone and Jewellery show their creations
- Unconventional studio jewelry made of traditional materials – an exciting combination
- The latest trends and techniques from Idar-Oberstein
- Text in English and German

ROCKstars presents works that focus on the "eternal material" in jewelry: they are declarations of love, experimental snapshots, or rebellious works revolving around precious stones. At Campus Idar-Oberstein, newcomers to the gemstone and jewelry scene have dedicated themselves with body and soul to the intense examination of precious minerals. A world trade center for gemstones of all kinds as well as a place of study off the beaten track, Idar-Oberstein is the students' rehearsal room, where existing structures are broken up and progressive designs developed. As ROCKstars, the students and alumni present contemporary jewelry that not only shows gemstones in unexpected and unconventional applications but at the same time redefines a centuries-old aesthetic, thus positioning it in society. Text in English and German.
