- With stunning photography, interviews with locals and the occasional location tour
- More than 200 pages of thoughtfully curated travel inspiration
- You will not only discover the classic destinations, but also hidden gems, creative hubs, beach paradises, foodie heavens and ancient wonders

A stroll through a maze of winding streets lined with bright white houses, where you might stumble upon little cafés or art galleries, is often the highlight of a holiday. In Villages in White, travel writer Léa Teuscher highlights some of the most remarkable whitewashed destinations around the world. From classics like Santorini to hidden gems like Loutro, these pages will take you to the most spectacular places washed in the lightest hue. Find out what makes each village unique and catch a glimpse of what it's like to live there. A must-have for globetrotters who want it all: beauty, history, and creativity.

Léa Teuscher is a London-based journalist specializing in travel, food and architecture. She is also senior sub-editor at art and design magazine *Wallpaper.
