"Laura Mary Todd's new book delivers surprises. Her perspective is architectural and international."— Old House Journal

Wallcoverings have moved far beyond the classic floral wallpaper. New designs and new techniques are opening up a whole range of inspiring possibilities for inventive wall treatments. This book brings together the best ideas from an international roster of architects. Included here are wallcoverings with reliefs, textures, and fabrics, along with advice on how best to incorporate repetitive patterns, neutral touches, and artwork: everything is possible. The book contains practical information and how-tos to help you get started and personal insights from interior designers who are eager to use wallcoverings and share their tips.

Laura May Todd is a freelance writer based in Milan, but was born and educated in Canada. She writes full-time about design, architecture, interior design and style.
